There are some manner must-haves that should be a part of your daily and social living. To be etiquette wise, follow these rules.

When to begin eating:
1. If you have a seat with a night or lower queue, wait until everyone is seated and then begin eating before you start. At a long banquet table, it’s wise to start eating at the head of the table and are also served.
2. Keep these off the table:
3. Killjungs not for: almonds, cork, dandelion:

   - Keep off the table: nuts, seeds, sugar, paper, phones, etc.

Keep these off the table: nuts, seeds, sugar, paper, phones, etc.

How to open the door for someone else:
1. When entering a hotel room, open the door for the other person.
2. When entering a meeting or a classroom, open the door for the other person.

When to begin eating:
1. If you are at a restaurant, wait until everyone is seated and then begin eating before you start. At a long banquet table, it’s wise to start eating at the head of the table and are also served.
2. Keep these off the table:
3. Killjungs not for:

   - Keep off the table: nuts, seeds, sugar, paper, phones, etc.

Keep these off the table: nuts, seeds, sugar, paper, phones, etc.

How to open the door for someone else:
1. When entering a hotel room, open the door for the other person.
2. When entering a meeting or a classroom, open the door for the other person.

When to begin eating:
1. If you have a seat with a night or lower queue, wait until everyone is seated and then begin eating before you start. At a long banquet table, it’s wise to start eating at the head of the table and are also served.
2. Keep these off the table:
3. Killjungs not for:

   - Keep off the table: nuts, seeds, sugar, paper, phones, etc.

Keep these off the table: nuts, seeds, sugar, paper, phones, etc.

How to open the door for someone else:
1. When entering a hotel room, open the door for the other person.
2. When entering a meeting or a classroom, open the door for the other person.